Besieged by a Big Dog.
A large brown striped dog with lips flecked with foam and blood and crazed by the cruel treatment he had received from a lot of boys kept the tenants in the four story tenement house at No. 653 east Sixteenth street frightened in their rooms for nearly an hour Friday afternoon. A dense crowd of people from the neighborhood meanwhile gathered about the house, but the dog was killed without its having bitten anyone.
The dog came running down Avenue B just before four o'clock in the afternoon and turned into Sixteenth street. It was collarless and covered with foam and its tongue was protruding from its mouth. The brute was yelping as if in pain. A crowd of street boys pursued the animal. They had a rope with which they finally succeeded in lassoing him. They dragged him by the neck through the hallway of Mrs. Ellen Lee's dry goods store in the middle of the block, into Mrs. Lee's back yard, where, after jerking the poor brute about until they were tired, they vainly tried to make it drink from a basin of water.
In some way the dog managed to twist itself loose and then it made a circuit of the yard, finally springing for the throat of Bessie, a 17-year-old daughter of Mrs. Lee, who was standing on the back steps with her 16-year-old sister Annie.
The latter saw the dog about to spring and dragged her sister into the house just as the crazed animal shot over the steps. The boys ran out through the hallway with the dog after them.
Then the animal darted into the hallway of the tenement house at No. 653, and, rushing up into the dark hallway at the first flight of stairs, fell upon its haunches and set up a yelping that struck terror to the hearts of every one in the vicinity. For nearly half an hour afterward the dog practically owned the house. The women and children within bolted their doors for safety and ran to the front windows screaming, "Mad dog! Mad dog!" No one dared to attempt to leave the building. A crowd gathered outside. In the midst of it all Bernard McDonald, who is a laborer, arrived home from his work and attempted to go upstairs to his rooms on the fourth floor. He made his way half up the first flight of steps when he saw the dog crouched on the landing growling savagely and apparently ready to spring upon him. McDonald ran on and, ascending to the roof of No. 651, reached his rooms there.
Finally Policeman Patrick McManus, who was attracted by the excitement, came running up, and drawing his revolver shot the dog dead.—N. Y. Herald.

LOOKING FOR A NEW HYMNAL.—The Protestant Episcopalians of Philadelphia, together with their brethren throughout the country, who have all been anxiously awaiting for six years the new hymnal for the American Church promised by the Triennial convention at Chicago in 1886, are sanguine of its adoption at the general convention at Baltimore next week.
"We confidently expected it three years ago at New York," said a prominent vestryman of one of the local churches last evening, "but the committee of seven assigned to the task of revision, codification and amplification had for some extraordinary reason omitted many of the most famous old hymns of the church, such as had aroused the devotion of congregations for a century."
"Among those left out were such venerable favorites as Bishop Heber's 'By Cool Siloam's Shady Rill,' Sir John Bowring's 'Watchman, Tell Us of the Night,' Dr. Watts' 'When I Can Read My Title Clear,' Dr. Muller's 'I Would Not Live Alone,' 'How Firm a Foundation, Ye Saints of the Lord,' popular in communions since 1767, and 'Come Ye Sinners, Poor and Needy,' in vogue since 1759. These bishops, three presbyters and three laymen were added to the committee, and it is now reported that they have restored at least half of the good old hymns tossed aside.
"The committee's altering of words in songs has also been corrected and unavailable new hymns struck off again. If adopted, as is expected, the hymnal will be in common use not later than this Christmas."
